A tiny friend

Milo finds Puff caught between two branches. Puff feels small and slow, so Milo promises to help.

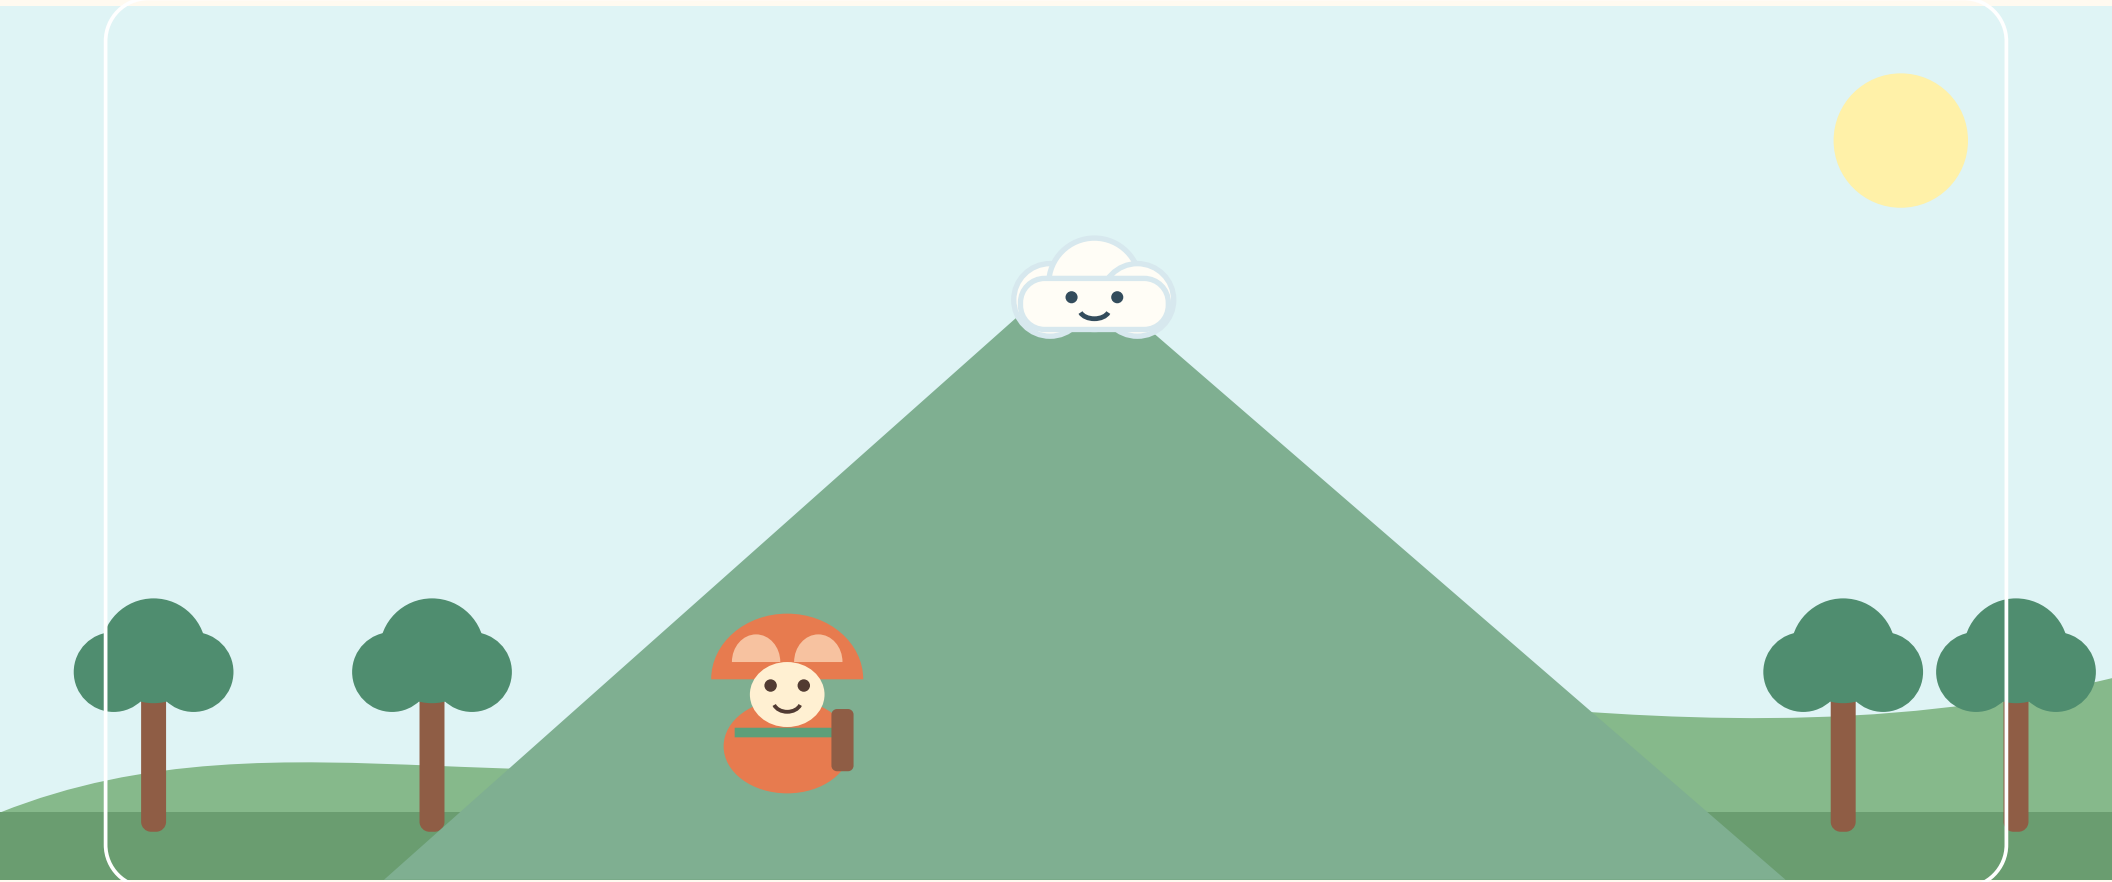

Who should help Puff?

Try together

At Windy Hill, the breeze lifts Puff and sends the little cloud toward a bush of purple berries. Plop!

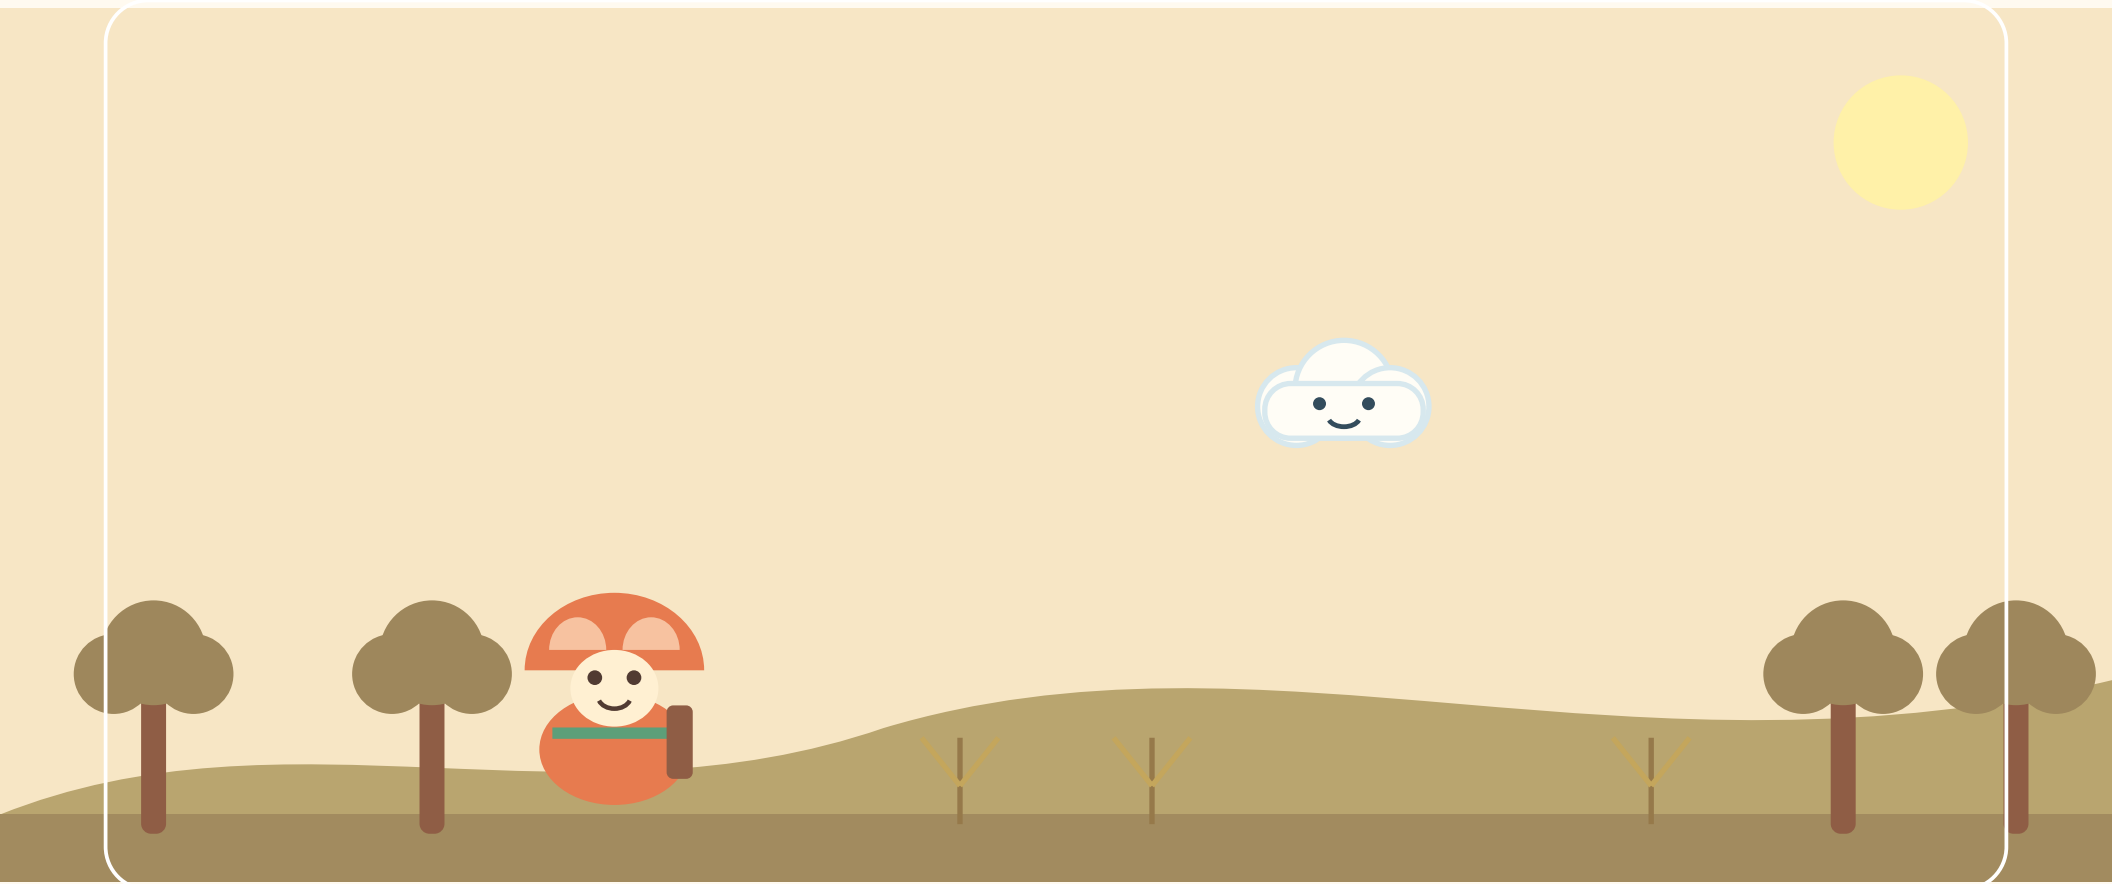

Which idea should we try?

Be brave

Milo and Puff climb Sunbeam Mountain. They are scared, but they try together. Puff floats, then drifts gently down.

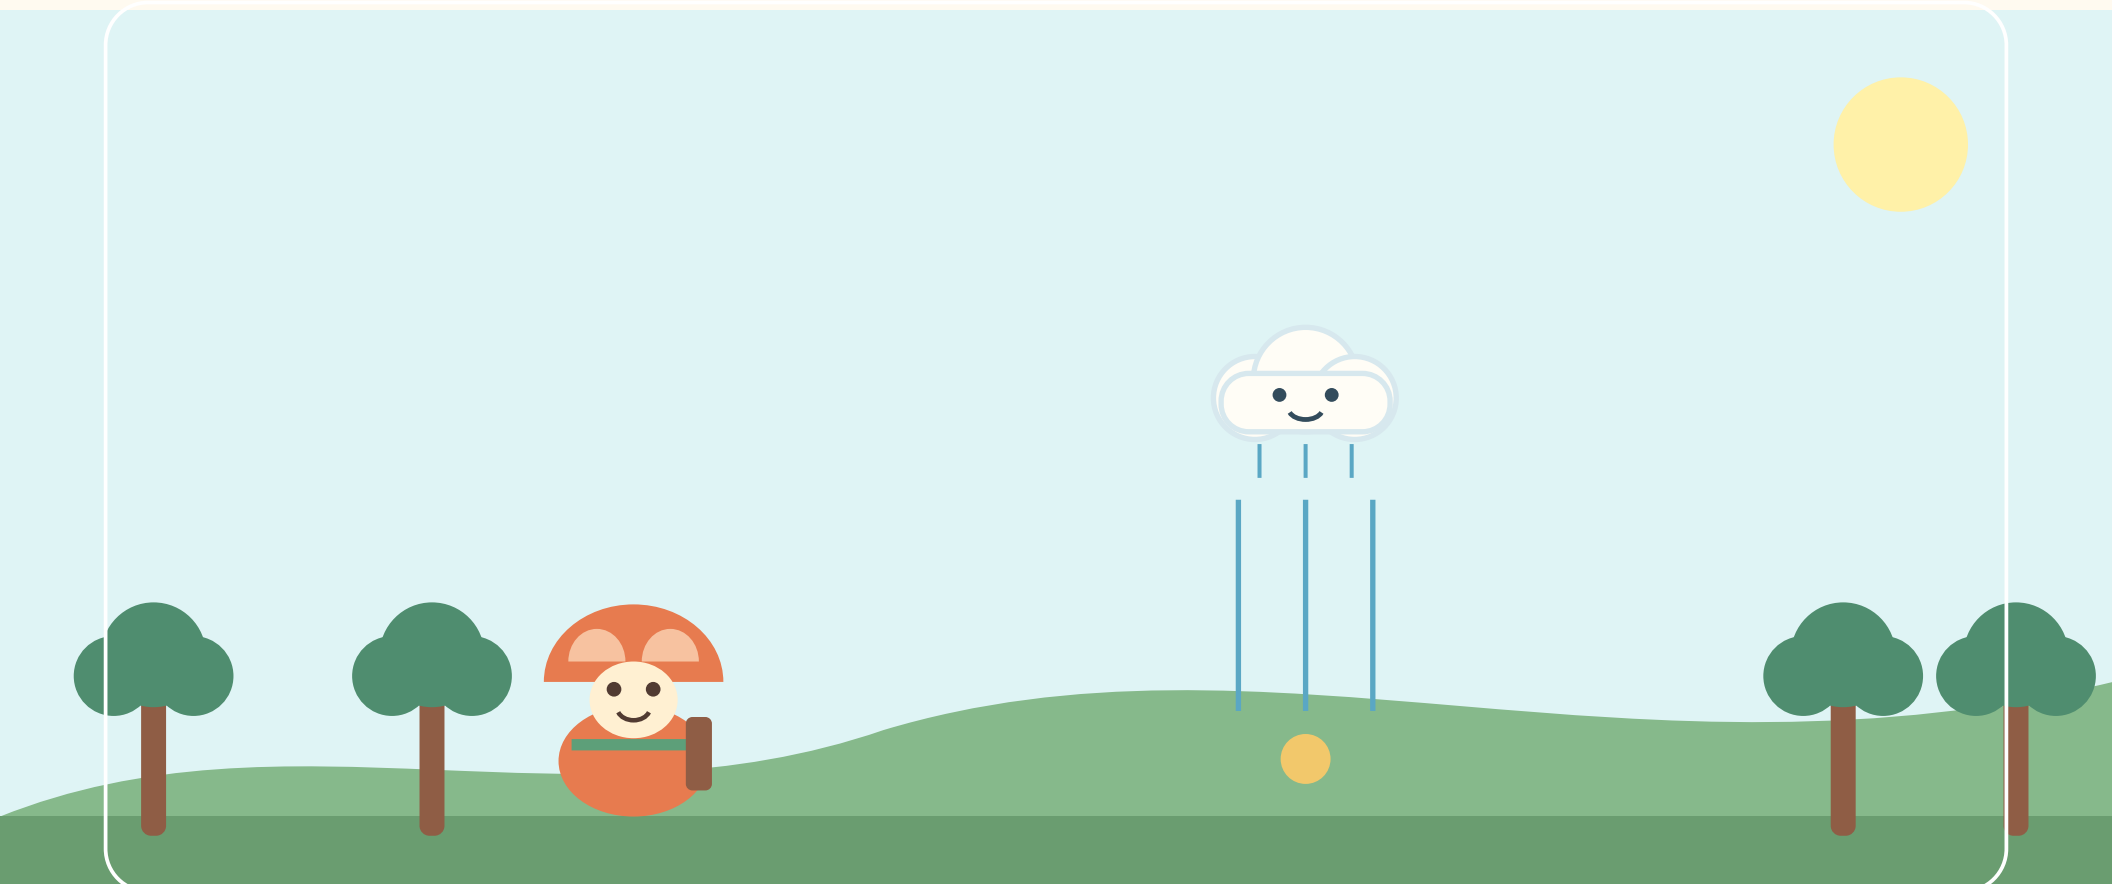

What did Puff learn?

A forest in need

The sun grows hot. Flowers bend low, the river grows narrow, and the animals need water.

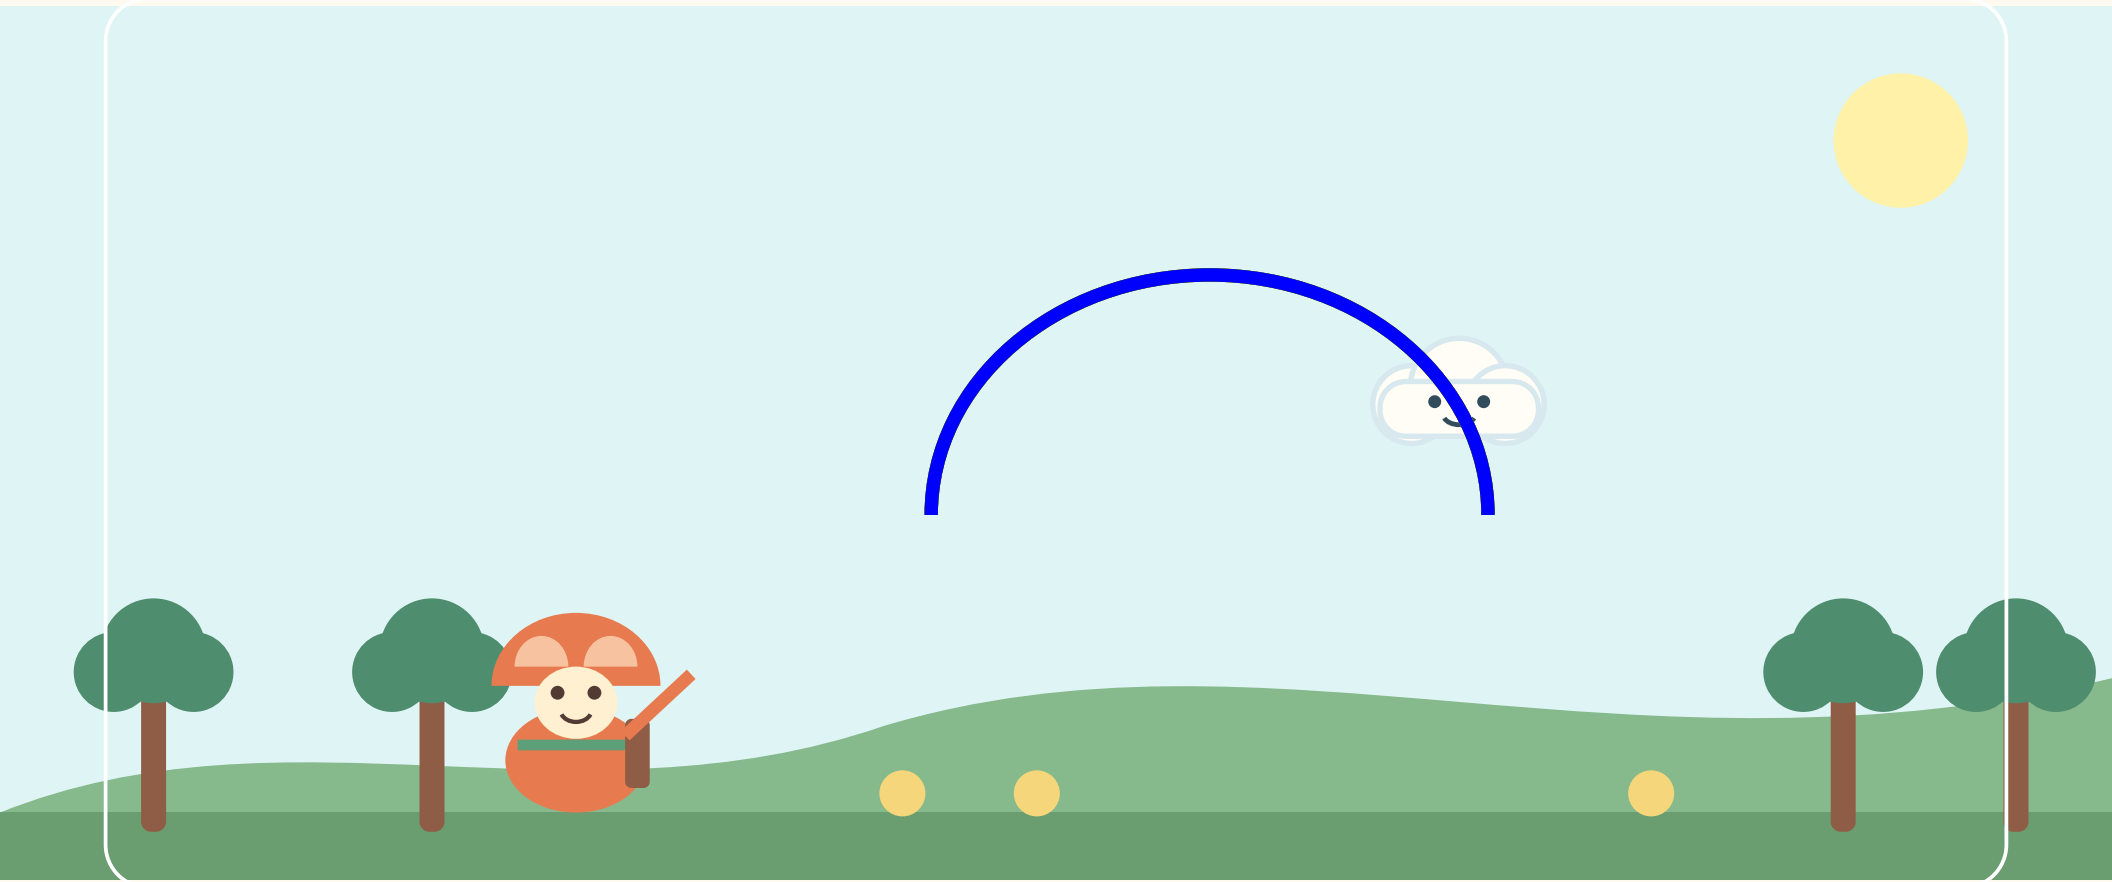

Can a small cloud help?

A little drop

Puff remembers the thirsty flowers, rabbits, and frogs. One cool drop falls. Then another.

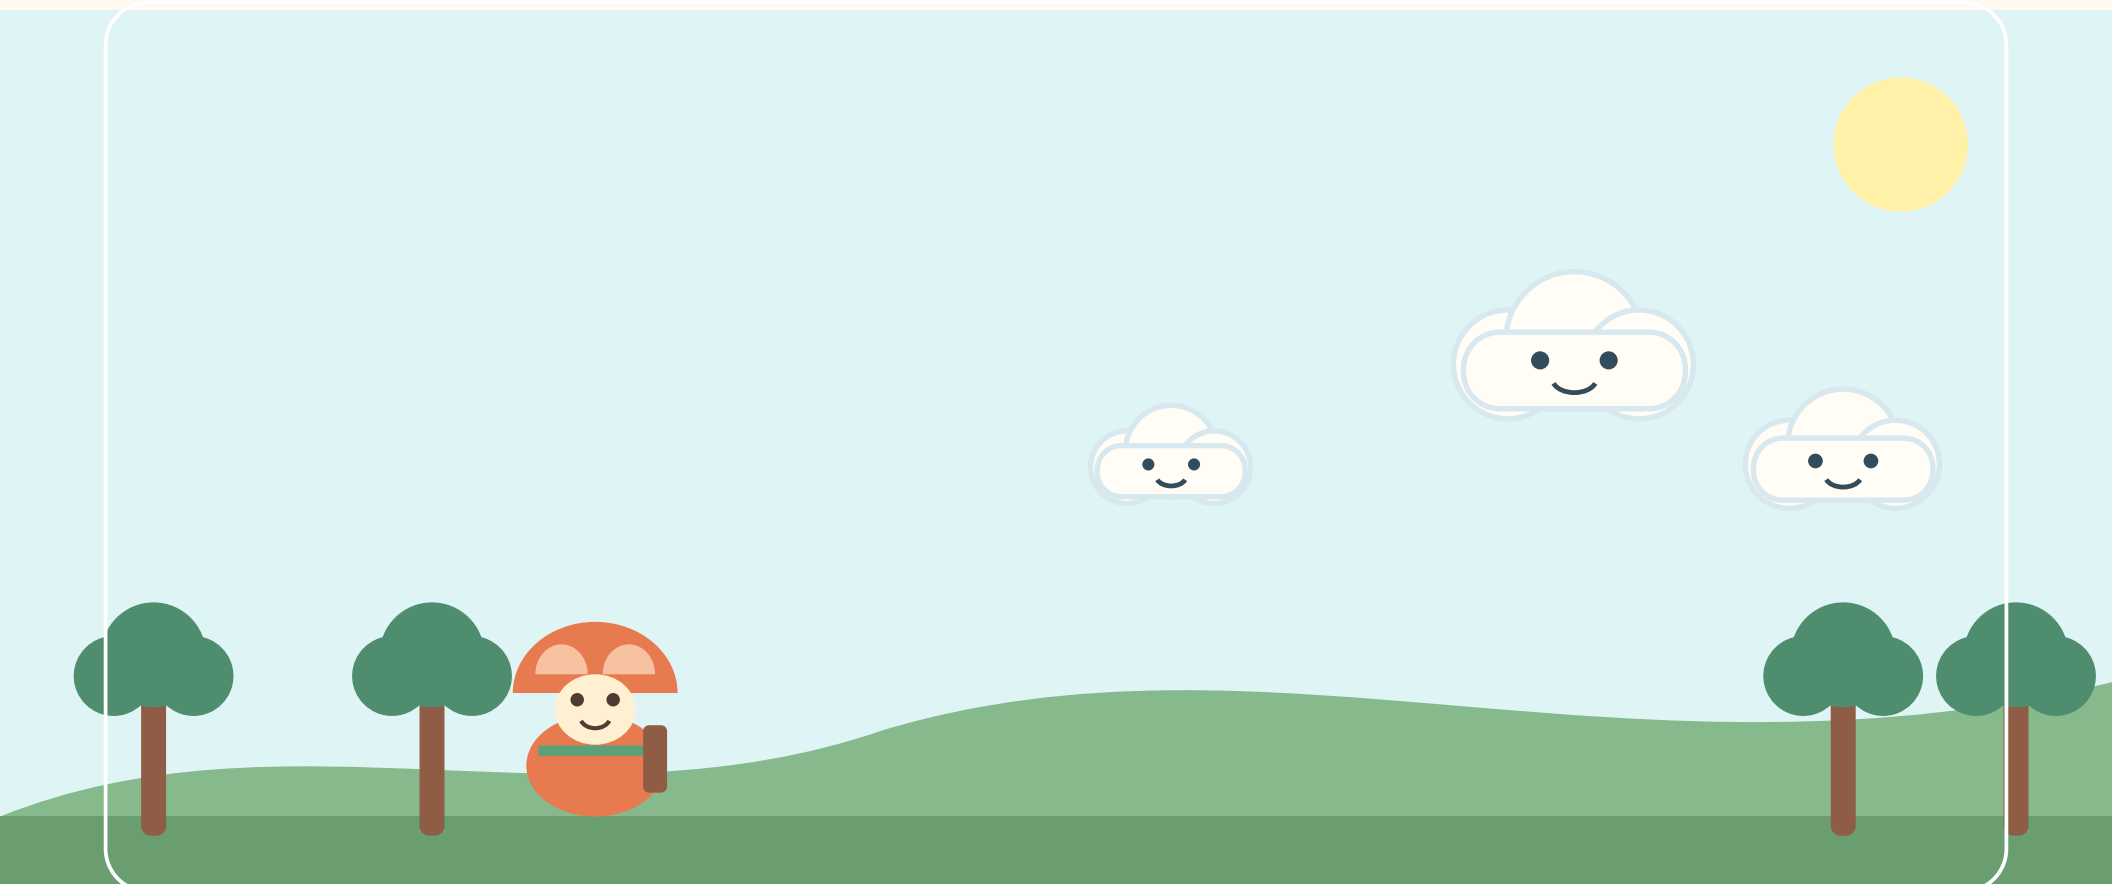

What happens next?

A big difference

Gentle rain fills the stream and opens the flowers. Everyone dances beneath a little rainbow.

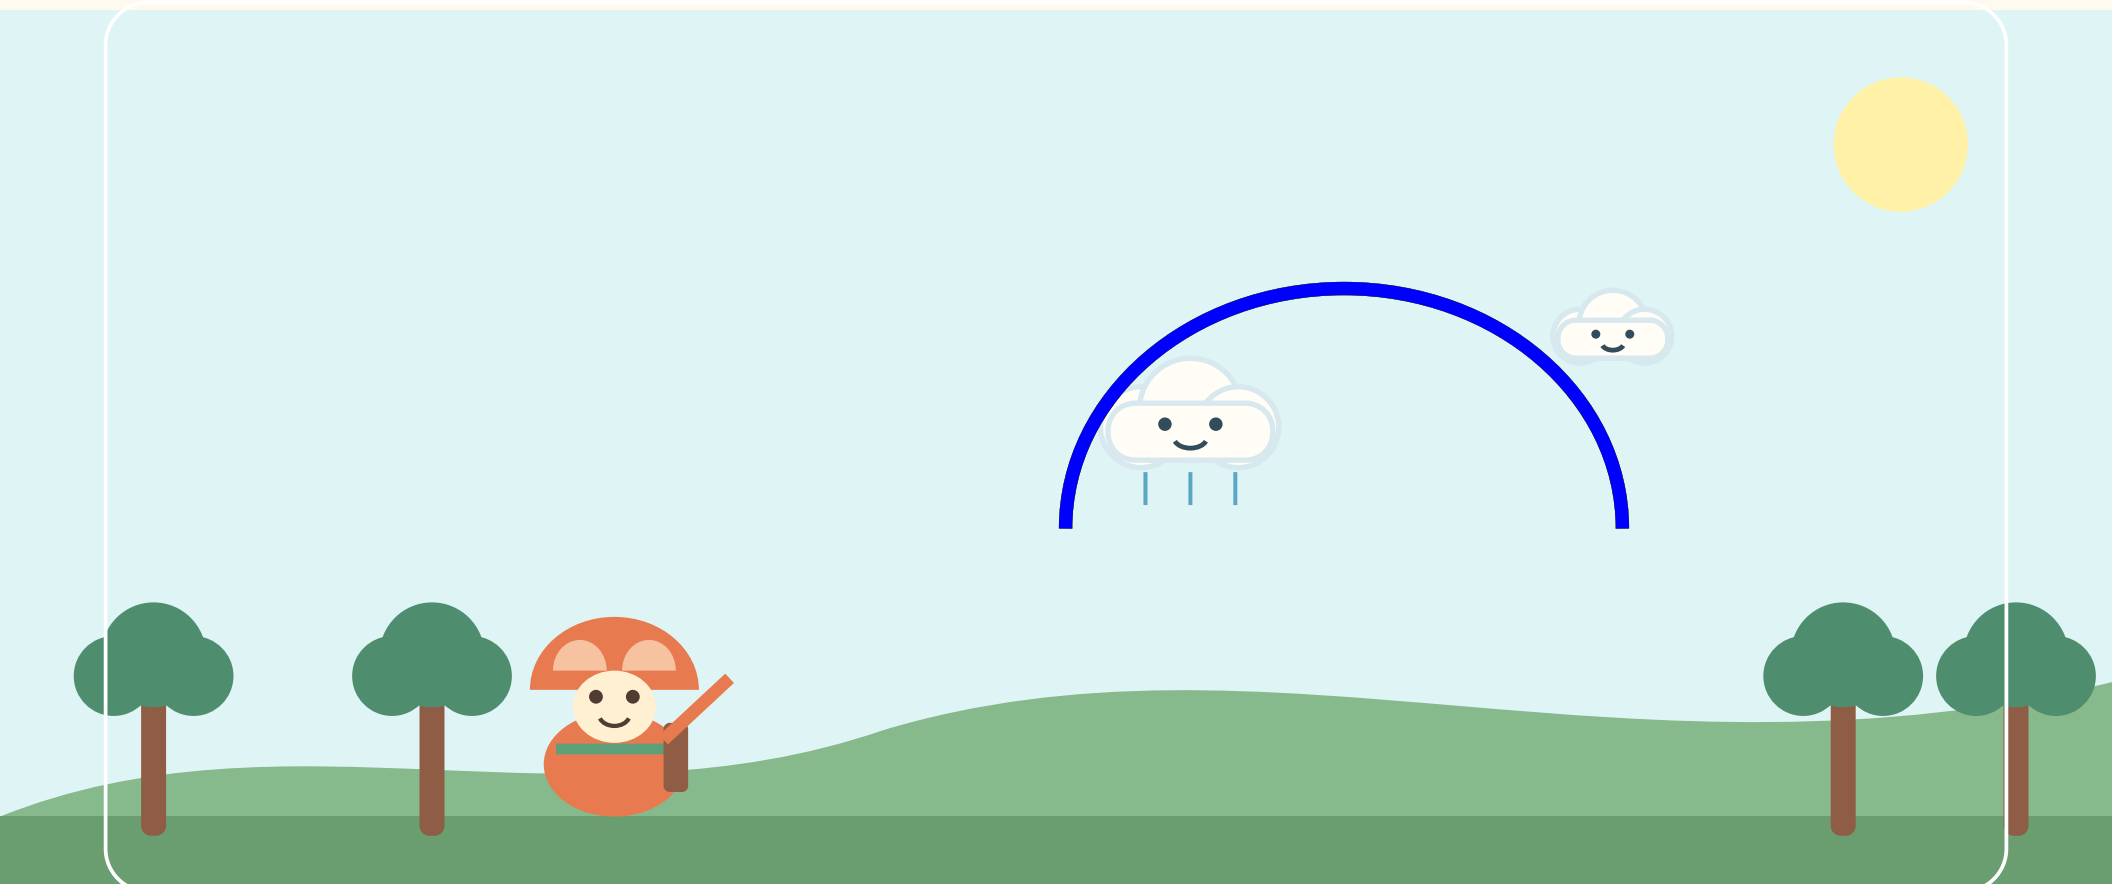

How does the forest feel?

Every gift matters

The big clouds see what Puff has done. The sky needs every kind of cloud.

Does Puff belong?

Welcome, friend

Milo and Puff visit the forest every morning. When a new cloud arrives, Puff makes room for one more friend.

What will you do for a new friend?
